Heritage in Action

The Coffey Family's Service Spans Four Generations

The Coffey family represents a four-generation legacy of service to the U.S. Air Force and the broader Air and Space Forces. Maj. Ben "Irish" Coffey, an F-15E Strike Eagle pilot and Chief of Air Staff at the 48th Fighter Wing, exemplified that legacy during Iran's April 2024 drone and missile attack on Israel. Despite a weapons malfunction, Coffey and his weapons systems officer, Capt. Lacie Hester, flew two combat sorties, intercepted six drones, and remained in the fight until the assault ended. For his extraordinary heroism, Coffey received the Silver Star.

The historic mission was later highlighted in the U.S. Air Force documentary Dangerous Game and discussed by Coffey at AFA's 2025 Air, Space & Cyber Conference.

The Coffey lineage of service dates back to the Army Air Corps and continues today across military and civilian roles within the Department of the Air Force. Irish's father, Col. Ben "Whiz" Coffey, dedicated more than three decades to the Air Force mission and has been a longtime leader and supporter of the Air & Space Forces Association (AFA).

Together, Whiz and Irish are Life Members of AFA, reflecting a multigenerational commitment to service, leadership, and advocacy. The Coffey family's enduring partnership with AFA highlights the organization's role in connecting generations, preserving heritage, and inspiring future Airmen and Guardians to Aim High.
